PAKISTAN | SNOW LAKE TREK

LAUNDRY

There are no opportunities on the trip to get a reliable machine wash for your clothing apart from rest days in Skardu between treks - as we are not in any one place long enough to facilitate proper washing. Most of the time though, we have enough downtime at hotels and at camp to do laundry by hand using soap or organic washing liquid (not provided).

We recommend that you bring along some biodegradable/organic soap so that you can wash your clothes when we have downtime (often we will arrive at camp with hours of daylight to spare). Most camps along the trek have flowing water sources, so washing clothes is pretty straightforward.

By day 2 of the trek, you will be ready to wash your socks and other layers as it tends to be dusty and warm at the beginning of the trek.

BUYING TREKKING CLOTHING

In general quality over quantity is a good rule to live by when purchasing new adventure gear. For socks, go for merino wool, for shirts, merino or other synthetic materials are best. With the exception of maybe underwear avoid cotton clothing for any item you might wear on the trekking portion of the trip.

Perhaps the most important item on the list is a good sleeping bag. Be sure to go with something that has at the minimum - the recommended temperature rating.

Alpine boots are not mandatory but in the event of some snow or lots of rain, having a more durable, proper-waterproof boot is nice.
